The General Meets His Army

Roy Anderson and your correspondent were out in the "war zone" all Tuesday afternoon looking for excitement and something to photograph. The Associated Press had informed its members at noon that a battle was scheduled to start around Blevins, continue to Washington, and wind up at Hope—the "Reds" fighting the "Blues."

Well, when you drive up a nice gravel highway you get a smooth ride, but you don't see much of the Army. They're "hid out." All we saw were a few machine-gun crews at highway intersections, umpire cars with white flags patrolling the road—and the only clue to the fact that perhaps 100,000 soldiers were hidden somewhere in the woods was a never-ending stream of supply trucks.

But we pressed on to Blevins anyway. The Red army—at least on Tuesday afternoon—held possession of all the territory from Hope to Blevins. And at Blevins we sat down to wait.

An hour and two colas later there was a big commotion among the sergeants and privates and motorcycle-dispatch riders who practically filled Blevins. A big Army Packard pulled up alongside the Bank of Blevins and a two-star chap stepped out—Major General Robert C. Richardson, Jr., division commander, the man who is directing the maneuvers.

Mr. Anderson and I met him. General Richardson is a cordial and courteous gentleman, originally from Charleston, S. C.

Even in mimic warfare it's a dramatic moment when the big chief bursts unexpectedly into the front line.

A sergeant I was talking to hurried back to a truckload of machine-gunners and I followed him. They asked, "The big boy's here—what gives?"

"Aw," replied the sergeant, "he just wanted to be sure we were where we were supposed to be."

And so the war rolls on.

The Corsican and the Austrian

It proves nothing. It is no guide to the future. But the temptation to draw parallels between Hitler's invasion of Russia and Napoleon's is too strong, like the desire for an extra slice of elderberry pie.

Napoleon was a foreigner, a Corsican, ruling France. Hitler is a foreigner, an Austrian, ruling Germany.

Napoleon terrorized Europe for years. So has Hitler.

Napoleon picked a fight with Russia without a scrap of provocation, simply because he had decided that Russia must be eliminated. Hitler did the same.

Napoleon had assembled a motley army of French, Italians, Swiss, Dutch, Poles, and Germans. Hitler is using, in addition to his Germans, Rumanians, Bulgarians, Slovaks, and Italians.

Napoleon advanced as far as Smolensk without a serious battle, and took that city by storm in a two-day operation, Aug. 17, 18.

Here the pattern begins to diverge. Hitler advanced into Russia in three great movements, in the north against Leningrad, in the south against Kiev, and in the center against Moscow.

That central drive reached Smolensk and captured it in a two-day battle about Aug. 10, 11. Here Hitler is a week ahead of the Napoleonic schedule.

Hitler has made great progress also on both the southern and northern fronts at the same time, but roughly speaking he stands today where Napoleon stood at the same time.

Now let us follow the fortunes of Napoleon the rest of the way. On Sept. 7 the Russians stood, and under the able Kutusoff gave battle at Borodino on the Moscow river. Both sides had enormous losses (the French 32,000, the Russians 47,000), but Kutusoff withdrew in admirable order, retreating through Moscow and taking its people with him. On Sept. 14 Napoleon occupied the city.

Between the 15th and 19th the Russians burned the city, and after remaining five weeks Napoleon got out of there. By the time he had reached Jaroslavl, Viasma, and Krasnoy, fighting continually the harassing Russians and Cossacks, cold weather descended. By the time he forced a passage over the Berezina river, the suffering from hunger and cold was terrible.

On Dec. 3 Napoleon left the army to its fate and went back to Paris. The tattered remainder, only 100,000 of the 500,000 with which he started, crossed the Niemen to safety on Dec. 13. The expedition had cost Napoleon 300,000 lives and 1,000,000 prisoners.

All this is related, not to rouse any false hopes that history is about to repeat itself. It seldom does, and then with variations. But up to a point it raises some curious parallels.

Superstition

The humming bird was sacred to the Aztec god of war and men in some Mexican villages still hang the dead body of a humming bird about their necks to gain the love of a woman.

The favorite pastime of Secretary of State Cordell Hull is croquet.

City to Spend $9,000 for W. & L. Repairs

To Furnish Power to Callahan Company During Construction Period

The Hope city council Tuesday night passed an ordinance calling for the expenditure of not more than $9,000 to rebuild a boiler at the water and light plant to furnish electricity to the W. E. Callahan Construction Co. during the construction period of the Southwestern Proving Ground.

Mayor Albert Graves announced that the city had a contract to furnish a 50 kilowatt capacity line to the Proving Ground by August 1 and a 200 kilowatt capacity line by September 1. The line on completion would carry a peak capacity of 250 kilowatts.

It was brought out in the discussion that regardless of whether the city furnished power to the Callahan Co. the boiler would have to be repaired. It was also estimated that not more than $1,000 per month.

Asks Consideration

E. S. Leonard, of the SCS, W. E. Sparks of the F. S. A., and B. E. McMahon of the AAA offices in the courthouse asked the council to make arrangements to furnish the government offices current until they could hear from higher channels whether they would pay for the current.

This action followed the cutting off of electrical current in the offices by the city Monday on the order of Judge Fred A. Luck. The county offices barely missed being cut off by paying back bills for the past two months. The council promised to look into the matter but expressed the opinion that it was Judge Luck's responsibility and not the city's.

The council voted to give the Y. M. C. A. license fee from a carnival which the club is sponsoring. Roy Stephenson represented the club.

The regular 5 mill city real and personal tax assessment levy was again voted by the council. This has been in force for years and is no raise in taxes.

Discuss Trailer Question

Leo Hartfield submitted a list of property holders along with a permit application to establish a trailer camp inside the city limits on East Third street near the Brookwood school.

Recently the council passed an ordinance requiring certain regulations to be met in establishing and handling a trailer camp which also included the filing of a permit for approval.

The council deferred action and called a special meeting for next Tuesday night when the matter will be heard. Several property holders in the area filed a petition with the council asking that the permit not be granted.

The city health department called the council's attention to the wrecking yards inside the city limits as breeding places for mosquitoes. The city attorney was instructed to draw up an ordinance containing certain rules and regulations which must be met and presented to the council for approval.

The council voted that taxicab license not be issued until the request is presented to the group for approval.

Russian Tanks Mass to Fight Nazi Forces

Despite Advance by Germans Russians Begin Counter Offensive

By the Associated Press
Masses of Russian tanks were reported by the Germans to be counter attacking the Nazi lines on the lower Dnieper river front late Wednesday while elsewhere on the battle line the Russian counter offensive was said to have recaptured five villages.

The locale of the Red Army counter offensive, reported by the official Russian news agency, Tass, was not disclosed except that it was in western direction—possibly on the central front guarding Moscow.

The Germans said Red tanks were attacking Nazi troops storming up to the Dnieper river in an attempt to cover the retreat of a sizable Red force eastward.

50 Mile Advance
Adolf Hitler's invasion armies have taken a ring on Leningrad with another 50 mile advance the Russian acknowledged Wednesday driving to Novgorod region 100 miles south of the old czar capital.

While two other German and German-Finnish columns drove toward Leningrad from the west and north the Soviet communiqué said the fiercest battle raged at Novgorod, ancient wall city above Lake Ilmen.

The Russians said the Novgorod province terrain was favorable for a determined stand since half of it was covered with forests and guarded by about 1,200 lakes. The town itself stands high on a hill over the Volkhov river and is surrounded by swamps.

The Red army bulletin indicated that the Germans were beginning to use airborne troops in the 60-day-old battle, reporting that a number of big 4-motored Junker transports loaded with light tanks and men had been shot down.

British military experts predicted that the Germans would make an unprecedented use of airborne troops in an attempt to smash their way across the Dnieper river in the south Ukraine.

Authorized sources in London said the Germans had availed the mass use of parachute troops, planes and gliders such as used in the Crete battle to await just such an emergency as the Dnieper crossing.

The Germans said the left wing of General Von Rundstedt's army estimated at 1,500,000 men was advancing against stiff resistance toward the great bend of the Dnieper river.

Advices reaching London indicated that Marshall Budyonny had succeeded in withdrawing a great many troops across the Dnieper river but his forces were believed weak in guns and depending too much on the old time cavalry methods.

Hitler's field headquarters said that Nazi troops were successfully attacking the few remaining bridgeheads on the west bank of the Dnieper river still held by the Russians and indicated that a grand assault on the new Soviet defenses was about to begin.

German dispatches said the Nazi seige guns had intensified the attack on Odessa, Russia's great Black sea port, and that increased pressure was exerted on Kiev, the Ukraine capital. Nazi aerial observers said the harbor of Odessa was littered with wrecked ships.

Russia, noting bitter allnight fighting, conceded that the German advance had reached the Gomel sector, midway between Smolensk and Kiev as Nazi columns lunged eastward beyond the Pinsk marshes.

With the German drive to Novgorod sector Leningrad faced a 3-headed onslaught; from the west along the Gulf of Finland and from the north German and Finn forces were pressing down the Karelian isthmus some 75 miles from the city.

Russia declared all withdrawals were orderly and that Nazis were meeting strong resistance.

Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, has held the post longer than predecessors.

Childhood Verse
Many a thrilling and humorous story is told in the lines of old nursery rhymes and songs. See how many of these you recall by answering the following questions.

1. Where was the weasel chased, by whom, and where did he go?

2. Where were Little Boy Blue's cows and sheep?

3. Where were Little Miss Muffet and Little Jack Horner sitting, and what were they eating?

4. Who lived on the River Dee, singing "I care for nobody, no, not I, for nobody cares for me."

5. Where was the pretty maid going, what was her father's occupation and what was her fortune?

Holt Rules on SPG Cemeteries

Asserts Failure to Register Makes No Difference

LITTLE ROCK — A cemetery cannot be considered a private cemetery merely because it has not been registered, Attorney General Jack Holt asserted today. He said that a cemetery is a cemetery whether it is registered or not.

"I have no way of knowing the exact figures, but I doubt seriously that the majority of rural cemeteries in this state have been registered as required by law," Mr. Holt said. "It would be hard to find a 'strictly private' cemetery in rural Arkansas," he said.

The attorney general's office had issued no previous opinion regarding cemeteries in the proving ground area, and had not "revealed" that 12 cemeteries in the area were ineligible for federal assistance because they were private cemeteries, as reported previously.

It has been the War Department's policy to remove bodies from recognized graveyards to other cemeteries at no expense to interested persons. Removing bodies from unrecognized or private cemeteries has not been the government's responsibility.

Registration Required
Act 204 of 1929 required cemeteries to be registered with the county judge or mayor, depending upon the jurisdiction. A copy of the registration should be filed with the state Board of Health. The state board shall approve or deny applications for enlarging cemeteries or locating new ones.

In a warning published in the Gazette last week, the War Department advised persons interested in 12 cemeteries in the proving ground area.

Car, Bus Strike at Detroit

More Than 2,500 Vehicles Idle as Workers Strike

DETROIT — (AP)—Street car and bus operators of Detroit's municipal transportation system struck suddenly Wednesday leaving some 400,000 persons to seek means of getting to work. Thousands were delayed in reaching places of employment.

The strike brought from Detroit's mayor a threat to call upon the "might of the government" to end the tieup. "You can't run the city of Detroit," he warned the AFL leaders here at a conference.

A spokesman for the striking union, division 26 of the AFL, said the walk-out was intended to enforce a union demand for recognition as a sole bargaining agent for the operators.

The mayor said the demand called for a closed shop and said he couldn't grant that.

More than 1,000 street cars and 1,650 buses stood idle as a result of the 4 a. m. strike action.

Taxi drivers extended operations and reaped rich harvests. Different companies planned additional cabs which were put in service as fast as drivers could be found.

First Maneuver Comes to Close on Wednesday

Most of Soldiers Get First Taste of Real War Conditions

By JERRY T. BAULCH
WITH THE ARMY IN SOUTHWEST ARKANSAS—(AP)—The 75,000 men of the 7th army corps, operating as a close knitted organization for the first time, struck at the simulated enemy at dawn Wednesday with timetable precision and swept with columns of trucks and steel with troops before noon across a high ridge 10 miles west.

The coordinated frontal assault was by the 33rd (Illinois) and the 35th divisions while the 27th division hit from the south and presumably drove the opposing force into Oklahoma.

War Ends
The mission brought an end to the first battle problem of the controlled phase of the Arkansas war games.

Divisions readied themselves under the cover of darkness and attacked at daylight Wednesday following immediately in the last stages of a 30-minute shelling of the enemy positions by heavy artillery along the 16 mile front.

Shells Not Real
The shells were not real and enemy was represented only by a small token force of the 107th (Ohio) cavalry but miles of walking by the infantry, loss of sleep and dust thrown up by vehicles all brought home to the citizen soldiers the trial of going into battle.

It was the first battle for most of them.

With the dropping of bombs and the shooting of real machine guns Douglas dive bombers, attacking the 7th corps troops for the third straight day, added a realistic touch to the battle. The planes came out of the sky on marching columns on roadways and the men scattered for cover each time they appeared.

The bombers were from Shreveport, La.

Hope Tastes War
Hope also had its first taste of warfare when some 75,000 were thrown into operations in this area. Convoy after convoy of troops, and equipment and guns went through Hope throughout Monday, Tuesday, Tuesday night and Wednesday.

Throughout the day Tuesday local persons were greeted at their homes by troops manning machine guns and in some cases armored cars. As one local man put it "every bush in this area had a soldier behind it."

The 35th and 3rd divisions were assigned to seize and hold a 20 mile line from Blevins to Washington to Hope. The 27th division concentrated on reconnaissance, the main body of that division being held at its base near Blevins, to protect the southern flank of the movement.

The grand assault on the Blevins-Washington-Hope line was begun at dawn Wednesday and the attack was completed at 11 o'clock with the cavalry in full retreat.

Adkins Talks to Defense Group

Urges Officials to Establish Industries in State

LITTLE ROCK — (AP)— Governor Homer M. Adkins announced Wednesday that he had strongly urged defense officials in Washington last week to establish a steam power plant in western Arkansas to furnish an outlet for slack coal in the mining regions and supplement power for proposed and existing gas generated and hydro-electric plants.

He said the Office of Production Management and the RFC probably would announce in the near future the location of two steam power plants necessary in the establishment of a four hundred million pound alumina plant and a 100 million pound plant already authorized.

Adkins said he told officials of the

Proving Ground Families Given Loans by FSA

132 Re-locating Families Are Approved for FSA Assistance

The Farm Security Administration of Hempstead County is making a record aiding in satisfactorily re-locating farm families from the Proving Ground area in the county.

Reports from the local office Tuesday showed that 132 farm families in the Proving Ground area have approved for FSA assistance in finding and purchasing new locations. Of the 132 families approved, 85 have received financial aid for moving and living conditions. Six of these families have received money to purchase tents and twenty others have been approved for tent grants. Three of the applicants have been approved for the long term (40 years) tenant purchase loan. Six of the families have been approved for the short term emergency loan of from $100 to $300. This loan is available to farmers who, finding desirable new locations, need funds to make a down payment on the farm they wish to buy until the War Department settles with them for their land in the proving area.

Until last Friday, the short term emergency loan was made available to land owners only, but now the local Relocation Office has authority to make these loans to tenants as well as to land owners. A chattel mortgage is taken as security from the tenant and a real estate mortgage as security from the land owner.

Through the local and other newspapers, the local FSA office and the Extension Office has issued notices

Noted Reporters Here With Army

Sebring of Herald-Tribune, and Hottelet of the U.P.

Among callers at The Star office Wednesday were Lewis B. Sebring, Jr., correspondent of the New York Herald-Tribune, and Richard C. Hottelet, United Press correspondent, who are covering the Second Army maneuvers.

Mr. Hottelet, it will be recalled, was one of two American foreign correspondents arrested in Berlin last spring in retaliation for the arrest of German news agents in the United States.

Mr. Hottelet, then in charge of the United Press Berlin bureau, and Jay Allen, correspondent for the North American Newspaper Alliance, were detained by the Germans from March 15 to July 8, later being released and ordered out of Germany.

Mr. Sebring has been specializing in Army reporting for the Herald-Tribune for the last year.

Amusement Co. Opens Here

Park Company Locates at Division and Laurel Streets

The Park Amusement Company, featuring ten big rides, has opened on the old Garrett Gin lot at Division and Laurel streets for a 12-day play.

The Amusement Co., is managed by Cliff Liles, who is familiar to Hope citizens having brought his show here for many years.

As in recent years, the show is sponsored by the Young Business Men's Association.

Admission to the ground is free. The company features 10 big rides; 12 Shetland ponies, a super-merry-go-round, baby auto rides, ferris wheel, and mix-up. The shows are featured by the Cotton Plantation Minstrel.

Canadian Head Visits Britain

To Confer With Churchill and Inspect Troops

LONDON —(AP)— Canadian Prime Minister Mackenzie King arrived in Britain by plane Wednesday to confer with Prime Minister Churchill and other war leaders and to inspect Canadian armed forces in the isles. Making the crossing with the King were Norman A. Robertson, Under Secretary of State, and Brig. Gen. George P. Vanier. The Prime Minister-making his first flight and first trip to England since the start of the war—planned to take an overnight train to London. The question of whether King should visit London to discuss the coordination of the Empire's war efforts has been the subject of debate in Canadian circles for months. This was given impetus by the fact that Canada was not represented at a meeting of Roosevelt and Churchill and regarded by some as a slight.

Any farmer in the proving area desiring assistance in finding or in buying a new location may call at the local Relocation office where officials in charge, after learning the size and type farm he wants, will check with him the farms listed with them. If the farmer finds one in which he is interested, the office will assist him in making an investigation. If, after the investigation, the farmer wants to buy, the FSA will assist him in getting a short term emergency loan.

Herschel T. Harbin, Project Relocation Supervisor, states that the short term emergency loan is of benefit particularly to the small land owner, and he urges those farmers who own small farms and need financial aid in obtaining a favorable relocation be-

News, Reels and Shots From Out West

HOLLYWOOD — Behind the serene picture called "Mr. Celebrity," soon to be started, deals with a group of once famous people now living in the same boarding house. The stars: Clara Kimball Young and Francis X. Bushman. At Metro they're filming "Unholy Partners," a New York story of about a quarter century ago. In the cast are Barbara Bedford, Charles Ray, King Baggett, Mahlon Hamilton, E. Mason Hopper and Naomi Childers—six big stars of the same period. Now they're working as bit players.

"In Hollywood," says Martin Greene, "when you shake hands with someone it's generally to keep him at arm's length."

The man who financed the original production of "Ecstasy" is peddling the rights for a Hollywood remake. Hedy Lamarr, with or without clothes, won't be in it. She's happy for the first time in a filming of "H. M. Evans, Esq.," in which she plays a plainly-tailored career girl who ages to a woman of middle years.

Casting notes: Mae West has an impressive offer to appear with a circus ... Mickey Rooney joins Jack Benny and William Powell as a female impersonator; dons a Latin American dancer's outfit for a song-and-dance number in "Babes on Broadway." ... Sigrid Gurie has turned down another anti-Nazi film role, fearing reprisals against her family in Oslo.

At least two U. S. companies, Columbia and M-G-M, will make several pictures in Buenos Aires studios, with executives and scripts from Hollywood, and actors and technicians hired in Argentina. But I'll bet the best will turn out to be Walt Disney's tour of South America with a crew of artists and story men who'll sketch scenes and people and jot ideas for future animated cartoons.

In the role of international news commentator in "Woman of the Year," Katy Hepburn will speak a few sentences in seven languages.

Metro has been having some trouble with the heavy brogue of Barry Fitzgerald. Nobody could understand him, he was told, so he was given a recording set and ordered to practice at home in correcting his diction. Few days later he reported that the recording machine was no good. "I complained," but I can't understand anything I've said."

When Olson and Johnson first appear on the screen in "Hellzapoppin'" they'll be seen getting out of a taxi-cab with two skunks, four pigs, a calf, a quartet each of ducks and geese, a flock of pigeons, two St. Bernard dogs, two Great Danes and a pair of bloodhounds.

Yanks Have Combination

Harris Calls Ace Second Sacker Best He Ever Saw

By HARRY GRAYSON NEA Service Sports Editor

NEW YORK — Stanley Raymond Harris calls Joe Gordon of the Yankees the best defensive second baseman he ever saw.

That's a mighty fine compliment coming from Bucky Harris, who plays considerable second base himself.

Washington's head man has looked at more than a few fair to middling second sackers, too. He saw one named Eddie Collins and got a peek at Napoleon Lajoie.

"Lajoie, Collins, Rogers Hornsby, Frank Frisch and Charley Gehringer, to name five, outthrew Gordon with plenty to spare, but not even Collins could play second base like the young man from Oregon," says the original boy manager.

"Lou Boudreau and Ray Mack of Cleveland are a corking young combination, but Mack does not start a double play as rapidly as Gordon, nor does he cover as wide a range. "Gordon takes off in all directions and never makes a mistake. He's tops in my book as an infielder, and he isn't the worst hitter in the business especially when it comes to being a long ball."

Rizzuto Now Comes in When Going to Right

Harris unhesitatingly rates Phil Rizzuto and Gordon among the great second base combinations of all time.

That also is something in the way of a boost, for Harris once made a lot of double plays with a bloke named Roger Peckinpaugh.

Rizzuto could do with a stronger arm, but will manage to get along with the one he has.

Little Scooter was criticized at the outset for his inability to throw out runners from deep short after going back and to his right to take balls.

Rizzuto now comes in when going to the right and he has learned to make the play quicker.

Rizzuto stands only 5 feet 6, but that is not necessarily a handicap. Donnie Bush of Detroit and Rabbit Maranville of the National League were famous shortstops standing high to a grasshopper.

While Harris prefers a short-stop somewhat rangier than Rizzuto, he points out that the Brooklyn kid's lack of reach on wide and high throws and such is offset in a good measure by the ease with which he gets down for a grounder.

Yankees Threaten Double Play Records

New York's infield, with 134 double plays in 112 games, threatens to break the American League record of 187, established by Cleveland in 1928. It also is in position to wipe out the major league record of 194, made by Cincinnati in 1928 and tied by the same club in '31, when Horace Ford and Hughie Critz were going strong.

Teamed with Gerald Priddy, now in the Yankee dugout, Rizzuto last season helped the Kansas City infield to 199 double killings.

Kansas City infielders threw to Johnny Sturm, who has been completing the Yankee double plays since Gordon was returned to second base. Infielders throw to Sturm with the utmost confidence, and with the physical edge left-handedness gives a first baseman, the St. Louis lad starts a full share of double plays himself.

With a 14-length lead and only 38 games to go, the Yankees should walk in.

The pitching could even bog down a

Police Are Still Searching for W. J. Whitmore

Worthy Joe Whitmore, negro, shot and killed his wife, Molly, late Tuesday afternoon near Clow, according to a daughter who witnessed the shooting. Dr. J. H. Weaver, Hempstead coroner, announced.

Immediately after shooting his wife with a pistol Whitmore fled and the police were still searching for him Wednesday.

Coroner Weaver said that no inquest would be necessary.

We, the Women

Uniformed Women May Be Joke — But a Comforting One in Crisis

By RUTH MILLETT

American women seem surprised that they aren't being given much consideration in plans for national defense.

Their leading clubwoman, Mrs. John L. Whitthurst, who is president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, recently protested that women are being discriminated against in the civilian national defense program.

Her main kick was that Mrs. Florence Kerr, formerly assistant Civilian Defense Director, had been replaced in the job by a man—leaving the women of the country without representation on the national home defense program.

When are women going to learn that nobody takes them seriously in their determination to play the part of responsible citizens until an emergency or a crisis is actually at hand?

A Free Offer With a Catch

CUSTER, S. D. —(AP)— Want some free lodging?
Then just pick out a night when the temperature is certain to stay above 65 degrees and take accommodations in this mile-high city.
Irked by tourists who ask for a cool place to stop, the Chamber of Commerce has offered to pay the lodging bill of anyone who finds the night warmer than 65 above.

One last bit of advice: Pick your night carefully—there have been only a few "payoff" nights in the past five years.

gines and first aid.

But nobody is laughing now least of all the British men who are pretty thankful that their women did take hold and fit themselves to do the hard and dangerous work necessary in a city bombed day and night.

It is more than handy, it is a salvation that the women of Britain can drive ambulances through bomb-torn streets, that they do know how to get the wounded onto stretchers and give first aid, that they are prepared to set up feeding stations in badly bombed areas where family kitchens have been turned into piles of smoldering brick.

And it will be the same in America. We can just expect to be laughed at now when we are busy learning how to do the jobs—considered men's work—but which will fall to us in any extreme national emergency.

We Will Be Spoofed

At Two

We can expect to have our uniforms spoofed at and made the subject of side-splitting cartoons now. But if we are ever called on to climb into those uniforms for an emergency, they'll look mighty comforting to those we serve.

So there is no need for American women to show surprise, or be concerned over the fact that we aren't given the place our numbers and our ability entitle us to in the home defense set-up.

When it comes time to defend our homes, we'll have all the responsibility we can take. We won't be funny women in funny uniforms taking ourselves far too seriously then. We'll be courageous citizens doing difficult jobs.

He also said he conferred with industrialists in Pennsylvania, Delaware and New York, urging them to establish plants in Arkansas to process Arkansas minerals—manganese, zinc, cinnabar, titanium and barite.

He added that in his opinion "there is a greater field for smaller industries in the state" and said as soon as the emergency period is over with he would turn "my attention to permanent industries."

No distinction is made by statute between private and public cemeteries in Arkansas, Mr. Holt said.

Prior to the adoption of the 1929 act, the location and control of cemeteries was largely a matter of custom, he said.

Copies of the opinion were released by Millard Alford, assistant attorney general, who in 1931-35 was prosecuting attorney for the Eighth Judicial district, which includes the proving ground area.

Congressman Advised
Earlier in the day, Mr. Holt sent a message to Congressman Owen Harris at Washington, advising him the office had rendered no opinion regarding cemeteries in the proving ground. A statement by Mr. Harris, released for publication Monday, had referred to "the attorney general's ruling."

Alcoa-TVA Agreement Aids Defense

WASHINGTON -- Behind the rather surprising action of the Aluminum Company of America and the Tennessee Valley Authority in throwing their arms about each others' necks and making a deal to let TVA control the company's power resources in the upper Tennessee Valley is one of those strange romances of big business and big government that illustrates the old principle, "If you can't lick 'em, join 'em."

In this case, it applies both ways. The corporation and the government here lie down in the same river bed. But it's a legal wedding and the only shotgun aspects of the case are a rearmament program, and in such times you can't question the motives of anyone, tycoon or bureaucrat, for wanting to do everything possible to produce more aluminum.

Aluminum Company of America, hereinafter referred to as Alcoa for short, has been having its troubles with the government and vice versa for several years. Alcoa has been damned as a monopoly, though the company maintains it has never done anything to prevent anyone else from going into the business if it could raise the capital. And if the truth be known, Alcoa heaved a big sigh of relief when Reynolds Metal did enter the field to take the heat off this monopoly charge. In spite of the fact that without a competitor Alcoa has brought the price of aluminum from about $2 a pound in 1900 and 70 cents a pound in 1919, to 17 cents a pound in 1941, its profits have if anything been consistently good, and that has brought upon it the finger of New Deal suspicion.

Sword Still Hung
In April, 1937, the anti-trust division of the Justice Department filed suit against Alcoa, charging the company was a monopoly and a party to

Polish Aces Blast Germany

American Symbol Forms Part of Squadron Device

M. W. Besterman, whose article on the RAF's famed Kosciuszko Squadron of Polish pilots appears below, is a well-known Polish journalist who recently arrived in the U. S. For many years Warsaw correspondent of the United Press, he covered the German invasion from the Polish side of the front, later served as an officer with a Polish artillery regiment in the Battle of France.

By M. W. BESTERMAN
Written for NEA Service
NEW YORK -- Even before there was an Eagle Squadron of Americans fighting with the R. A. F. the Stars and Stripes were winging over Germany and the occupied European coast, fighting for freedom.

They form the background of the coat of arms of the famous Kosciuszko Squadron, one of the world's toughest fighter squadrons, composed of Polish airmen who went to Britain to fight on after the fall of their country.

The squadron's "Stars and Stripes" insignia is a circle with striped background and a border of stars. On the background are superimposed two crossed scythes and the four-cornered cap of Kosciuszko's peasant insurgents.

Living Up to Traditions

The American insignia on the Squadron's planes is explained by the peculiarly American traditions of the group. Its very name goes back to the General Tadeusz Kosciuszko, great Polish patriot, who fought under Washington in the American Revolution.

After the fighting ceased on the Western Front in 1918, Col. Cedric Fauntleroy and 15 other American flyers continued fighting with the Poles, helped them win their war of 1919-21. They made up the first Kosciuszko Squadron. Their acts of courage and their fighting spirit made their names familiar to every Polish school boy. Sagas grew up around their exploits.

Col. Fauntleroy himself once saved a troop and munitions train from sure destruction at a washed out bridge by stunting so recklessly in front of the locomotive that he engineer had to stop the train.

The traditions which this first Kosciuszko Squadron left in Poland were inherited by the present group of Polish aviators now fighting with the British. Part of their story was recently told me by Captain C., a pilot officer of the squadron who recently stopped here briefly on his way to Canada, where he will train new Polish pilots for the squadron.

"We are only carrying on what we inherited from the first Kosciuszko Squadron under Col. Fauntleroy," Captain C. said. "We know that he must be watching us from the United States. And I hope he doesn't think we're letting him down. During the Battle of London last September the Kosciuszko Squadron downed 117 and a half German planes. Yes, half a plane, because we and another squadron bagged it simultaneously and each got half credit."

"The Kosciuszko Squadron isn't letting anyone down. It has three other records to be proud of. It shot down 67 German raiders in five consecutive days, half the total months' bag of the R. A. F. over Britain. It bagged 13 German raiders in less than a hour one day while King George, who was visiting its headquarters, watched. Records to Be Proud of "The record of the Stars and Stripes Squadron which would make Fauntleroy and his comrades proudest, I think," said Captain C., "was made by one of our youngest pilots, after downing three German raiders in an offensive sweep over France, he spotted a fourth attacking a compatriot. He started to give chase, suddenly realized he was out of ammunition. Without a moment's hesitation—he

Harris, Baker and Prothro Slated To Go; Only Indictment Against Them Is Bad Club; Others Could Be Fired For Same Reason

By HARRY GRAYSON
New Service Sports Editor
NEW YORK Stanley Raymond Harris seems to believe he still sets all right with Clark Griffith in Washington, where he has spent 12 of his 18 years as an American League manager.

But those close to the situation suspect otherwise.

President Griffith tells baseball writers that other clubs appear to hustle a bit more than the Senators.

Griffith adds that a manager can remain too long in one city. He objects to Bucky Harris' refusal of late to quit the dark confines of the dugout for the coach's box.

Harris coached at first base until this season, when things got so bad he couldn't stand it out in full view of everybody.

Bucky Harris is a famous baseball name and any baseball man will tell you he is one of the more accomplished managers.

Harris is a ball player's manager. The noble athletes like to play for him. A player has yet to leave a Harris guided club without a good word about the boss.

Harris became famous as the original Boy Manager by winning pennants and a world championship in his first two seasons at the helm of the Nationals.

Detroit's championship clubs of 1934 and 35 were on the field, required only Mickey Cochrane's catching, when Harris moved to Boston in '34.

Harris turned in a fine job in the South, too, with less than half the stuff Joe Cronin has had since. Though Lefty Grove developed arm trouble to have his worst year, Harris took the Red Sox from seventh to fourth.

Harris suffered the toughest break of his life when Thomas Austin Yawky, teething as the Boston owner, needing a short-stop and desiring to get somewhere in a hurry, paid Old Fox Griffith $250,000 and threw in Lyn Lary for Cronin.

It wasn't Harris' fault that Leonard Chase and Hudson couldn't win the first half of this season.

Buddy Lewis, the Nat's second best hitter for seven campaigns, goes to the army and all Harris gets as a replacement is Roberto Ortiz, out of the Piedmont League. Ortiz, a tall Cuban, is a reformed pitcher.

When there is a demand for a pinch-hitter, Harris has to call on old Buddy Myer, who is batting .255,

Silk Shortage Affects Magicians

NEW YORK (AP)—The nation's silk shortage is affecting the art of magic, according to Russell Swann, president of the Master Magicians of America. He says that magicians will be forced to eliminate all "silk tricks"—the favorite one being the illusion of pulling yards of gaily colored material from an empty hat or pocket as soon as their present stocks of silk cloth are exhausted.

U. S. Aviation Comes of Age

Airplanes Are Symbol of Modern Civilization

By MORGAN M. BEATTY
AP Feature Service Writer
WASHINGTON — Between National Aviation Day, 1940, and the same day this year (August 19), the airplane has reached full stature as

HERE'S A MILLION DOLLARS WORTH OF COMFORT SOLDIER for just a few cents

A refreshing coat of cooling Mexican Heat Powder gives you a coat of medicated protection against chafing. Use it on tender feet, overworked shoulders, sunburned skin. It will also stand guard between you and your shoes or equipment likely to chafe. Soothing, relaxing. Shower or no shower, it helps you beat the heat! Demand the genuine Mexican Heat Powder. Remember, it's medicated, yet costs only a few cents.

the great Jekyll-Hyde of modern civilization. And man's sky-bird seems destined to fulfill that role for unnumbered years to come.

That's the consensus of air-minded military, commercial and engineering opinion in the midst of our own feverish push for 50,000 airplanes for defense.

Most expert forecasters in the aviation field base their opinions on these contradictory and still developing facts:

1. The airplane has demonstrated its capacity to fly the oceans as well as the continents, regularly and safely. That means the plane even now is beginning to carry commerce to the remote areas of the earth and to eat up the distance separating the great centers of world development. It is thus capable in the future of relieving congestion of population and spreading the benefits and comforts of civilization to untold millions.
2. Military genius, meanwhile, has developed the airplane into a No. 1 weapon of war. It has not distinguished between helpless civilians and military belligerents. Until the military mind can provide better sights for its flying battlewagons, it is under blanket indictment for adhering to no code of civility.
3. The airplane, nevertheless, has proved itself a critical weapon of warfare, extending fire to every nation beyond front lines so that every nation must build that instrument to its efficient best, get the most airplanes its taxpayers can afford.
4. Yet, the air weapon so far has been able on its own hook to capture no better a strategic area than the island of Crete, a comparatively unimportant pawn of war. True, the feat was almost miraculous. But the fact remains that the bomb absorption capacity of larger, better-equipped aircraft for air conquest. To defend areas, too great for the moment for air conquest. Tomorrow, the air-plane may give a different account of itself.
5. In any event, the portent of the future is bigger and better airplanes, both for war and peace. If the plane develops in the next ten years as it has in the last ten, most air-minded military men envision great armies and navies of the air.
6. "We already know," says Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox, "that the range of aircraft will be 25,000 miles and more 10 years from now. That battleships eventually may fight in the skies, rather than on the seas... and an air transport may carry 1,000 men, instead of 50."
7. That means most air experts foresee the not far distant day when the airplane will have even more efficient motive power than the highly efficient gasoline motor. The dead-weight fuel requirements of motors now limit the range.
8. Already the airplane industry is exploring the fringes of new motive power. Some builders have brought out the principle of jet or rocket propulsion to an astonishing degree. By utilizing exhaust gases, from the motor, they claim they've added 10 to 15 miles an hour to air speed. Meanwhile, the scientists of all na-

Nova Is Ready for Joe Louis

Man Who Year Ago Couldn't Walk Makes Comeback

By HARRY GRAYSON
NEA Service Sports Editor

POMFRET LAKES, N. J. — Win, lose, or draw against Joe Louis at Yankee Stadium, Sept. 19, the story of Lou Nova's comeback from the grave is more remarkable than any one growing out of the battle possibly could be.

Looking at the confident and tanned Nova at Dr. Joe Bier's famous camp here, you wouldn't suspect that the tall Californian couldn't walk a block a year ago last June.

But Nova had suffered from Streptococcus infection for some time before Tony Galento stepped him in the 14th round in Philadelphia in September, 1939. The infection was the result of his squeezing a pimple on his arm and not having any alcohol to use as a disinfectant.

He looked fine before previous fights, but knew he wasn't well.

The brutal beating dealt him by Galento, whom Referee George Blake permitted to get away with everything in the book, put Nova in a hospital.

When Manager Ray Carlen was able to transport Nova to Woodland Clinic, near Sacramento, an arthritis condition set in. There he remained flat on his back for three months.

"Men have died from much less than what I had," beams the big colossus.

Work With Prisoners Puts Nova On His Feet

It was well after the first of the year 1940 before Nova felt like accepting the invitation of his friend, Bill Lewis, to visit the hot springs at Carson City, where Bob Fitzsimmons knocked out Jim Corbett. Until he came into an inheritance recently, Lewis was warden of the Nevada state penitentiary.

Nova's body responded to the medicinal waters of Carson City, but it was late July before he was in shape to box.

A red hot boxing bug, Warden Lewis had a ring set up inside the prison walls, and Nova's first sparring partners since his preparation for the Galento catastrophe were one-time fighters who were prisoners.

"It was a perfect setup for a fellow struggling to get back on his feet in this business," says Nova. "No one could see me. Inmates gave me all the work I could use at the moment and two or three of them rubbed me down as well as Ray Arco."

Totally Unafraid After What He's Been Through

Nova gradually lengthened his road work, but Galento considered him fit to take the first step on the road back.

Nova got $350 for knocking out Johnny Brjavce in Oakland.

Exactly 11 months later he is fighting for the world heavyweight championship with the top prize $30 and the anticipated gate $750,000.

Back in New York and big time again in January, Nova dropped Pat Comiskey in the opening and closing rounds, but went 10 rounds because he needed them.

In April he repeated his knock-out of Max Baer to earn the Louis shot, and knocked out Jim Robinson in Minneapolis in June just to keep in trim.

Since then he has been at Poughkeepsie with the varsity crews and in the Main Woods.

"No afraid of Joe Louis?" laughs Lou Nova.

"Not after what I've been through."

SECRET VOYAGE

By JOSEPH L. CHADWICK

YESTERDAY: The stranger of the Jim Hammonds $25,000 if he would tell him the location of the Sonora and break his contract with Jeffery Hammond. Jim made it. Eric Forbes in supplying the money, the stranger says he is not. Jim refused the offer, the stranger threatens trouble and leaves. Jim tells Curly Bates to follow the man, but Curly looks him in the mouth. The Aurora finally sails and Jim goes below in a rubber diving suit to look over the Sonora. He finds the bridge wrecked and charred as if by fire or explosion. Jim plans to go down the following day in a metal suit. He talks over the whole thing with Curly-Hammond and decides not to wait for the Sonora. The crew he sent to China, Mary Larsen's curiosity, the careful talker's habit, the other three, something on the Sonora.

EMPTY HOLD
CHAPTER IX
THE Aurora rode out a gale during the next three days. Jim made his second descent to the sunken ship when the sea calmed, and found that task had become more difficult.

Curly came down with him the following day. They began cutting huge holes in the hull. They wore metal suits, with lines fastened to the Aurora's winches by a boom.

It was slow work, cutting through steel plates with torches, and they couldn't stay down long at a time. Finally Curly suggested they use dynamite to hasten the work. They planted the charge late that afternoon. They phoned the crew to haul them to the surface then, and when they got out of their grotesque metal suits Jim set off the charge.

The water boiled as the blast went off, and the Aurora's hull gave a shudder. Bits of wreckage floated up.

Curly observed, "Now all we need is a bottom to put the ore in." And, as though in answer, one of the crew shouted, "Ship to starboard!"

Jim saw a ship, crawling like an insect across the horizon. He went to the chartroom and got binoculars. His face clouded as he examined the craft through the glasses.

He said, "It's that Cuban schooner, Curly. The one we met a couple of months ago, before we found the Sonora."

"And that means trouble, eh?" Curly asked.

"It's probably my careful-voiced friend," Jim kept watching the schooner. It was Diesel-engined, and it traveled fast. "It's keeping to its course, and it'll pass us by miles."

"I'll be back tonight, Spike. I'll be back. I'd suggest that you radio Coast Guard headquarters and let them know our position, just in case."

"No, not that. Hammond wanted this kept secret. We'll keep a double watch tonight. Whatever the play, it won't catch us napping."

He went to his cabin and took a revolver from the desk. He knew that Curly also had a gun, but the Aurora had no other arms. This wasn't a pleasant spot. Jim's face was darkly intent as he considered what might happen. He grew a little sore, thinking that he was about to be hijacked when his hands were all but tied.

THE more he thought about it, the more uneasy he became. He grew suspicious of Hammond. The man might have pulled a fast one on him. Hammond himself might have that schooner out, the man with the careful voice and the careless manner.

Jim thought a lot about that, during the night while he stood watch on the Aurora's bridge, but gradually Hammond's actions seemed less suspicious. The key was the girl, Mary Larsen.

She wasn't working with Hammond. Jim was sure she was in with the moneyed man. Jim's anger increased as he thought of Mary Larsen. She had tried to play him for a sucker; she was stringing along with that careful-talker; she had fallen for Eric Forbes, was probably in New York now as his secretary. She wasn't worth being sore about, Jim tried to tell himself, but the trouble was he was in love with her.

"Which," he said aloud, "is one big laugh on me!"

The night passed without any visitors, and when the red sun came up over the horizon there was no sign of the schooner.

Curly went down to the Sonora at about eight o'clock. He reported over the phone that the dynamite charge had been efficient. They could easily salvage the manganese. He was going into the hold.

He was down an hour, then asked to be brought up. He was in a Triton suit so the winch brought him up without the pauses required by a rubber suit. The boom swung his huge, grotesque form onto the deck. Jim helped him out of the suit, and Curly's face wore a strained tight expression. He said nothing before the crew but jerked his head for Jim to follow him to the captain's cabin.

There, he said, "Spike, that forehead hold is empty." Enough had happened because of the Sonora that nothing more could be surprising. Jim Mallory's expression showed nothing.

"The after hold, then?"

"If the ore is there it's slim pickings. The Sonora is a small tub, and even a full cargo of manganese wouldn't have made you rich. Are you going to cut into the aft?"

"I'll tear the Sonora apart," Jim replied, "and if I don't get my money out of her I'll have a chat with Mr. Jeffery Hammond."

"You have a written agreement with him?"

"Yes. But if there's no salvage I can't collect a cent."

Blacksheep opened the door and stuck his ebony head in. "Spike, a boat am comin'!"

JIM picked up the revolver at the desk and went on deck. The craft was far off across the blue water, but he was sure it was not the schooner they had seen the night before. He went up to the chartroom for glasses, then from the bridge studied the approaching boat.

Curly came up, asking, "What do you make of it, Spike?"

"It's a yacht, Hammond's, I think. And I hope so. I want to talk with that man."

The yacht bore down on the salvage boat. It was trim of line, and gleaming white. It was quite a bit larger than the Aurora. Through his glasses, Jim could see "Hammond Lines" lettered on its solitary funnel.

"Put down a boat," Jim said to Curly. "I'm going aboard her."

"It may be a trap, Spike. You've led him to the Sonora's position, and we know somebody wanted badly to know where she went down."

"This is no trap. Hammond wouldn't work that way."

Jim went to his cabin and changed into fresh linen and a white suit. When he came on deck again, the yacht was standing by a quarter of a mile off. Curly had launched a small boat with one of the crew at the oars. Jim went over the side and stepped into the boat.

Hammond hailed him as his boat came alongside, then shook his hand as he stepped aboard. The man said, "Any luck, Mallory?"

"No luck at all," Jim said. "Neither good nor bad."

Over Hammond's shoulder he saw Lois, darkly lovely, with excitement in her eyes. And beyond Lois he saw Mary Larsen. And that gave him a jolt. Mary met his gaze steadily, with laughter in her eyes.

KATRINKA, THE MARTIN'S MAID, settles a family problem

JUST LOOK AT THIS BILL. WE SIMPLY MUST GET RID OF OUR OLD REFRIGERATOR.

WHERE I WORKED BEFORE, MR. MARTIN, THEY...

YES, WE KNOW KATRINKA. THEY HAD A GAS REFRIGERATOR THAT COST AS LITTLE TO RUN THE DAY YOU LEFT AS THE DAY YOU CAME, AND YOU WERE THERE FOR YEARS.

AND IT NEVER MADE A SOUND, EITHER, MAMMA!... NOT AS NOISE AS THIS ONE. WE'D BE REPAIRED EVERY SO OFTEN...

DARN IT, I'M TIRED OF HEARING HER CONTINUALLY JINGLING THE PRAISES OF THAT GAS REFRIGERATOR. I'M GOING TO SEE FOR MYSELF.

DON'T WORRY, MISTER. I'M COMING RIGHT WITH YOU...

THAT'S RIGHT, NOT A MOVING PART IN ITS WHOLE FREEZING SYSTEM. A TINY GAS FLAME DOES ALL THE WORK. THERE JUST ISN'T ANYTHING THAT CAN WEAR OR MAKE A NOISE.

LET'S BUY IT, HELEN. I GET THIS SERVEL ELECTROLUX WOULD PAY FOR ITSELF IN THE SAVINGS WE'D MAKE ON OPERATING COST AND REPAIRS.

IT'S CERTAINLY A BEAUTY, TOO. JUST LOOK AT THE ROOM INSIDE. DID YOU EVER KNOW A REFRIGERATOR COULD BE SO FULL OF CONVENIENCES!

EVERY YEAR, more and more people who've had experience with other makes are changing to Servel Electrolux. They know the Gas Refrigerator "stays silent... last longer"—because its freezing system has no moving parts to wear or make a noise.

Different from all others

- ▶ NO MOVING PARTS TO WEAR in its freezing system
- ▶ PERMANENT SILENCE
- ▶ CONTINUED LOW OPERATING COST
- ▶ MORE YEARS OF DEPENDABLE SERVICE
- ▶ SAVINGS THAT PAY FOR IT

U. S. Watches for Jap Beetles

Japanese Menace Could Wreck a Midwest Cornfield

By NEA Service
NEW YORK. Ever since June, Uncle Sam's experts have been on the alert to prevent an air invasion of the mid-west and south. The potential danger is great, because the air-mindedness of the human race has spread to the animal kingdom.

The fact is that the younger set among Japanese beetles, hatched this June, have taken to hitch-hiking aboard airliners bound from LaGuardia Field here for the mid-west. So great has the menace become that the U. S. Department of Agriculture has had to station an anti-beetle unit of three experts to inspect all out-going planes and passengers at the airport.

Popillia japonica, as he is called by his friends (which is why you hear this name so seldom), made his unwelcome arrival in America from Japan after jumping ship at Riverport, N. J., in 1916. Since then this hard-shelled menace to crops has steadily eaten his way about the country until now only the south and mid-west are free of the scourge.

The Department of Agriculture intends that these regions shall remain free of the Japanese beetles. In the past month and a half its agents have nabbed over 200 of the pests aboard outboard planes and passengers. Japanese beetles are shrewd air travelers. Loathing cloudy weather, they won't travel unless visibility is perfect, ceiling unlimited. They are also particular about night flying, never show up at the airport after sundown or before dawn.

Taking Seriously Mr. Greeley's Tip. But once they are in the air, they are good travelers. In two experimental flights 99 beetles were carried between Pittsburgh and New York, at maximum altitude of 9000 feet. Only seven of them passed out on the flight.

That's why the experts give the planes such a thorough going over ten minutes before flight time. So if you are flying west from New York one day soon and a strange man says: "Pardon, madam," as he fingers the shoulder of your dress, don't slap him. He's just picking up a Japanese beetle who is trying to take Horace Greeley seriously and "Go West."

Johnny Draftee Is Not Mad—Just Terribly Hurt—As Uncle Sam Says, "18 Months More Buddy"

By JEAN LIGHTFOOT
NEA Service Staff Correspondent
CAMP FOREST, Tenn. — "Goodbye dear, I'll be back in a year."
"Cause I'm in the army now."
"Take boxes and radios from Fort Meyer to Camp McQuade, from Custer to Claiborne, from Albuquerque to Indianhead Gap and MacArthur to Mitchell Field have been swinging the optimistic lyrics and their corny, unlovely music for months. "Boogie Woogie Bugle Boy" and "I've Been Drafted—Now I'm Drafting You" also give the soldiers a run for their nickelodeon nickels—but "I'll be back in a year" was the favorite.
It isn't more.
"The 33rd Division's parody libels rhyme and scansion: 'I'll be back God only knows when.'
And at Fort Bragg, N. C., the boys of the Ninth are wailing:
"Goodbye dear, I'll come back with a beard."
"If I do come back at all..."
"General Complaint" Takes Command

A year ago nobody expected twelve months in khaki to be a short and simple annum. Least of all the lads with low draft numbers. And no one—apron-flapping mother, "yes"-voting Congressman, General George C. Marshall himself—expected a million and a half boys to go leaping gleefully about like so many leprechauns over the prospect of spending an extra 18 months under arms.
So they're groaning.
For every khaki-wack kid from farm, slum or quiet hills who likes the army fine because he met it half-way with callouses and a side-meat appetite, there are three who'd like to go back home to girl friend, tweed suits, mother's cooking.
Who wouldn't?
But a frequent visitor to any army camp would be hard to convince that the groaning is unhealthy; that it will shake morale, breed uniformed slackers, or dislocate the defense program.

The selectees grouse, naturally, about an 18-months extension of their gun-toting, but it's toughest on those with girls back home. Army talk goes around the table at a five joint near Tullahoma, Tenn., among boys from Camp Forrest and their dates. Left to right—Pvt. Harry Eckenroed, Dorothy McKnight of Cleveland, Ohio, from Camp Forrest and their dates. Left to right—Pvt. Harry Eckenroed, Dorothy McKnight of Cleveland, Ohio, from Camp Forrest and their dates. Left to right—Pvt. Harry Eckenroed, Dorothy McKnight of Cleveland, Ohio, from Camp Forrest and their dates. Left to right—Pvt. Harry Eckenroed, Dorothy McKnight of Cleveland, Ohio, from Camp Forrest and their dates.

The same unscoured chorus has risen in every barracks and mess hall in the country, maligning goonish food, 9 o'clock taps, gun-boat shoes, one shower a day, and a salary that would not keep a dainty mouse in cheese.

It's not alarming. Just natural. Like a college boy griping about fraternity house food—which he still eats in preference to the less social fare at the dormitory; like a student, screaming about the stiffness of exams—which he still passes in preference to a disgraced home-going.

Attitude Depends on Dispositions
What the average selectee thinks about having his government regiment his future for another 18 months is as personal a matter as his nose or his toes.

Twenty per cent of the opinion he forms is influenced by his pre-drafting position in life, the breaks he has had in the army, his awareness of the national emergency, his exposure to the anti-defense element at camp, and whether or not he has tickler tremors for a girl back home. The other 80 per cent seems to depend entirely on his disposition. It's good he makes the best of things. If it's bad he makes a malcontent's worst of them.

Fair examples are a pair of privates in the 11th Quartermaster regiment at Camp Forrest. "You'd be surprised," says one sincerely, "how well these guys get along."

"Just one big, unhappy family," groans the other.

"Q. B. is plenty soft," continues the first. "We can hole up in barracks for an afternoon nap almost any day." "Except it's too damned hot to sleep."

"Don't mind him," Pollyannas the bright-sider. "He's nuts about a gal in Nashville, Me. I like the army all right, even if it is for a longer stretch than we figured. Nothing rosy, you understand. But somebody's gotta do it."

Privates Eller and Cox are Bristol, Va., boys stationed at Fort Jackson, S. C. Their presoldiering experiences and environments follow the same pattern as closely as a pair of Jack Benny programs. Ask them how they like the army.

"Not bad," says one.

"Lousy," says the other, leaning his head out the car window to go "Boo!" which is apparently Fort Jackson equivalent to "Yoo-hoo," at a couple of girls.

"Looks like they're going to keep you in awhile."

"So what?" says the first, willin' as Barkus.

"God forbid!" wails the second, slapping his hand to his forehead.

Politics in Kentucky

Personal Pleas of Candidates Read Like Diaries

By AMY PORTER
AP Feature Service

BEATYVILLE, Ky. — They say harsh things about Kentucky politics, but they shouldn't. Primary elections here in Eastern Kentucky brought to light the finest sentiments among the candidates.

Walter McFarland, candidate for jailer, made this statement in the Jackson County Sun: "I am 66 years old, a farmer and have a crippled wife riding around in a chair and this is the reason that I am asking the people for the Jailer's place."

That she may be a McKee so that her people may come and see her on public days, and I can be there to talk and advise your boys and lead them to the right and not come back to that old brick building any more.

"My wife is one eyed John Lakes' daughter and Jeff Morris is her grandfather."

"If elected I can make you as good if not the best Jailer you ever had. I hear some people saying that I don't need the place. What I have I have labored for it. I have never been any expense to the county and have paid taxes ever since that I was 19 years old."

Politically effective as it is to have a wife who deserves sympathy, it is even more advantageous to a candidate business when he climbed into khaki at the Fort Leavenworth, Kan., induction center; has a disposition the Bobbie twins would envy.

"The army's a riot," he said after a few days of "The pillows small, funny, so one fellow pouts shaving lotion on his. And know what we've got in our barracks? An ex-boot-legger, a lawyer, a bootblack, and a night watchman who can't sleep. He just sits on the edge of his bunk all night and smokes cigars!"

Private Stein's enthusiasm has not waned after two months. "Guess they will keep us around a few years," he writes. "It'll take me that long to figure out what gets the 3-19 off the ground, so I don't mind."

Can't Print Phil Beta's Reaction

Out there's the 31-year-old Phi Beta Kappa sergeant who had browsed in such dilettantisms as Greek and early American architecture before his number was up. He counted on recommendation for officer's training, missed out when bigger guns decided he was too valuable in the office and passed him up in favor of younger men. What he has to say about the draft term extension is very colorful, but it wouldn't do for your maiden aunt to hear.

A Camp Robinson the scrappy 35th Division, half of it military-minded National Guard, expects trouble, raises few eyebrows at the draft term extension, and chafes against the pantywaisting time between routine training and some semblance of action.

"You'll find that's true at almost every camp where the National Guard regiments form the nucleus of a selectee-padded division," explains a Robinson sergeant and former newspaper man. "Not many of them really expected a year of this to be all we'd get. But either way, they want to make some sparks fly. Maneuvers aren't enough."

Army Gradually Becomes Business

So more and more of the selectees join the groups at every camp that definitely don't hate war. They smell powder at maneuvers, feel their feet toughening to heavy shoes and their fingers quickening to sixth sensibility on rifles and heavier weapons, grow sinewy and strong and become drugged by rugged routine and regular living.

They quicken to the night sounds on bivouac, are intrigued by the mechanical mysteries of field communications and chemical warfare, share the dusty, tensile, sandlot excitement of storming a hill, surprising an enemy. And army becomes a business with them—like insurance or accounting or clerking in a store.

to be a preacher or to have a mid-wife for a mother.

A preacher candidate in Compton could and did say, "I have saved thousands of souls in this country and I want every one of them to vote for me."

A former midwife in Whitesburg ran a notice in the paper saying, "I brought hundreds of babies into the world. Now I want every one of those babies and their children to vote for my son John."

A candidate for sheriff in Powell County appealed to conscientious parents. He says, "Elect a fellow who'll take care of your boys when they are in trouble and not shoot their heads off the way some people have done."

Local pride won many a vote for Dewey Morris of Jackson county. His published statement: "As most of you know I had to leave this, my native county and follow my job to Madison County in order to feed my family. I am pleading with you people to elect me your jailer . . . so I can bring my family and come back home where we have longed to be since we had to leave."

In the newspaper "Thousand Sticks," in Hyden, W. H. Mattingly makes his plea for election to the office of county judge. "I am presenting my claims to a great compact body of the truest, most loyal and sensible people the sun shines on anywhere in Eastern Kentucky, and for that reason you are entitled to have a man for your picket guard to carry the blazing torch and searchlight that will expose the wrongs and mis-application of justice and equity which we as a dependent people have undergone. Elect me to this sacred office, and the law shall be my guide, and my time, ability and energy will be given to bring you out from under the dark clouds of despair and disappointment into the bright sunlight of hope and contentment."

"Drive the devil out of your homes and let Jesus in and you have done nothing to fear."

"If elected I will build these branch roads furnishing you some work, and will deliver your commodities to you or as near your home as a truck can run."

"Will look strictly after the unfortunate ones that can't help themselves, and relieve every burden possible from the wealthy by safeguarding your interest. Yours sincerely, W. H. Mattingly."

Herman Gabbard, another candidate for jailer in Jackson, strikes a divergent note when he says, "Most of my opponents are seeking to get elected on some form of sympathy. I could put up as good a hard luck story as anyone but that is real injustice to you . . . I want to thank you again in advance for any assistance you give me."

Diplomats in Washington

As Unconquered World Shrinks Diplomats Expand

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON — As the world unconquered by Hitler shrinks, the diplomatic world in Washington expands.

Burrowing into the memories of old-timers, I find that there never was a time—not even during World War I—when there were so many "foreigners" in Washington. Some embassy staffs have increased a thousand-fold. There are purchasing commissions, special military and naval delegations and attaches, secretaries and clerks.

One should start with the British embassy, purchasing commission, etc., but I'm not going to. I'm going to start with the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Only a few months ago, Amtorg, the Russian purchasing agency in this country, was running out of work and about half of its staff was sent home. The embassy staff slipped below levels of any recent years.

Now the embassy staff has 15 accredited diplomats; the Amtorg boys are coming back and what is happening to the clerical and secretarial staff is mushrooming. The luxurious old Pullman mansion, built from the sleeping car fortune, is now the Russian embassy. A few months ago it looked like a haunted house. Now it looks like a week-end excursion.

Has Radio Towers

Not only that but the Russians have taken over another spreading old mansion on Military Road, just off Rock Creek park, and it too is brimming with a couple of radio towers that stretch skyward to bring the latest news and diplomatic code from Moscow.

It is ordinarily a quiet, sleepy neighborhood, but not any more. Stopping in at a little house a few hundred yards away, I was informed by the "landlady" that she would like to ask me in, but that all her rooms were occupied and in order to take care of the tenant house, she had established her own quarters in the basement.

But the increases in the Russian, Norwegian, Greek, Australian, Chinese, French and other delegations are only a drop in the bucket compared to Great Britain.

British employees, both American and English, now number in the thousands, and on K Street Northwest is the new British employment agency, busily devoted to nothing but placement of workers in the various missions and commissions. Veteran civil service officials from London have been brought over to supervise.

I have counted 24 different commissions and agencies now representing Great Britain here.

Long ago, the huge British embassy on Massachusetts avenue was filled to overflowing and when the British Purchasing Commission dumped its duffel here, they had to take over floors in the Willard Hotel. That lasted less than a fortnight. Official Washington had hardly caught its breath before the English took over the swank apartment house where the late Andrew Mellon once lived.

Since then, it has been touch and go and the English now are scattered through half a dozen other buildings.

Social Activity Declines

Oddly enough, all of this vast expansion in the diplomatic corps has been attended by a great decline in diplomatic social activity. In the first place, the folks from abroad are too grimly busy. In the second, it's too difficult to tell whether the friend of today might be the enemy of tomorrow—or vice versa.

The one social amenity that is observed—and religiously—among the British workers and their bosses—is tea-time. Every day at 4:30, from Lord Halifax down to the lowliest office boy, waits for a cup of tea and a bit of cake.

NOTICE

Announcing Mr. John Cecil Hicks who has been added to our force of barbers. We invite all Mr. Hicks' friends and acquaintances to call on him. He will be more than pleased to meet all.

It Seems There Was a Stork

HICKORY, N. C. —(P)—Four boys were born in quick succession at a hospital here, and four girls followed soon thereafter. The following day seven more babies were born—a virtual baby blitz that taxed the hospital facilities.

But Harry Steelman explained it all. He saw a stork—so he said—standing on 15th street.

The bird seemed to be preening himself. "And he looked just like he was going for another load," Steelman added. Next day the hospital reported five new babies.

Population Increase

A population increase from 464,356 in 1930 to 489,971 in 1940 was shown by Minneapolis, Minn., 16th largest city in the United States.

Our home town is Lake Charles, La., where we played for 7 weeks this Spring and 12 weeks in Alexandria, La. A few letters of reference shown below.

CITY OF ALEXANDRIA

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

Mr. Cliff Liles, Manager of the Park Amusement Co., of Lake Charles, Louisiana, has just completed a twelve weeks engagement in the City of Alexandria, Louisiana; where he conducted entertainment of a clean, fine nature, which the natives of the city and the visiting population enjoyed very much, and we do not hesitate to say that we will be glad to have Mr. Liles return at any time with this class of pleasure.
